
The Call Structure

A Proven Framework for Successful Warm Outreach

The call runs in four distinct phases, each designed to move the prospect from a casual conversation to a committed consultant-led process.

PHASE 1: Warm Up (2 min)

Open with a genuine, relaxed check-in. If this is a friend or peer, ask about life. If it's a professional contact, ask about business. The goal is to lower the temperature and signal that this isn't a high-pressure sales call.

"Hey [Name], great to connect. Thanks for making the time. How have things been over at [Company Name]?"

Why it works: Two minutes of human conversation before business is what separates a comfortable call from a transactional one. Don't rush this.

PHASE 2: The Process (5 min)

This is where you take control. You're walking them through what's going to happen, clearly and confidently. Name the four steps in order, then close with a check-in question.

"So, just to give you a quick rundown of how this works. My goal is to help you save 5 to 10 hours a week by finding the right AI tools for your specific workflows. The process is pretty simple:

- 1. I'll send you a short 5-minute form to get basic info.*
- 2. I'll do some pre-research on your tools and team.*
- 3. We'll jump on a 60-minute deep dive to interview you about bottlenecks.*
- 4. I'll build your custom AI Roadmap with 3 to 5 specific tools.*

Does that sound like a plan?"

Tactical Note: After asking "Does that sound like a plan?", stop talking. Wait for the "yes." The silence after that question is doing important work. Stay quiet.

PHASE 3: Homework + Booking (3 min)

This is the most critical phase. Two things must happen: the audit call is booked, and they know the form is coming. Do the booking live while you're both on the call.

SAMPLE SCRIPT

"Perfect. So the next step is to get that deep dive locked in. I usually need about 3 days to prepare the research properly. Does [specific day/time] work for you for the 60-minute call?"

Critical Move: While they're talking, open Google Calendar and create the invite manually. Once locked:

"Great, that's in the calendar. I'm sending you the Data Collection Form right after this. If you can fill it out today or tomorrow, it lets me do the prep work so I'm not wasting your time on the deep dive."

The Dynamic Shift: By assigning "homework," you stop being a vendor and become a consultant managing a process.

PHASE 4: Wrap Up (2 min)

Keep this short, warm, and forward-looking. Confirm the two tasks they need to complete.

SAMPLE SCRIPT

"Awesome. I'll send that form over now. Really looking forward to diving into this. I think we're going to find some easy wins for you. Chat [Day]!"

- Task 1: Accept the calendar invite.
- Task 2: Fill out the Data Collection Form.
